Dear Texas Railroad Commission,

As a Texan working in the energy industry, I vehemently disagree with production prorating. The free market economy is one of the most important pillars of our free society in the United States, and without it we lose part of our freedom. Markets should be allowed to correct themselves, which will happen faster, and more efficiently, than a government entity can plan.

I believe the Texas Railroad Commission should not implement production curtailment. When the current global crisis finally subsides, our industry will return swiftly and stronger than before.

Thank you for your consideration of my views. I do not wish to testify at the scheduled meeting.

Regards,
Carter Grooms
